Dhayah Fort

Capacity: 25

Dhayah Fort, the UAE's last hilltop fort, sits on the UNESCO World Heritage Tentative List, surrounded by the mountains and date wadis of Ras Al Khaimah. This 19th-century mud-brick fortress, restored in the 1990s, stands on a 70-meter hill, offering sweeping views over palm groves to Oman and the sea. The fort was a strategic defense site and the center of the 1819 battle between British forces and local Qawasim tribes.

At the hill's base are the ruins of a larger fort and 12 ancient Wadi Suq tombs (2000–1300 BC), revealing impressive Southeast Arabian funerary practices. Managed by the Department of Antiquities and museums of Ras al Khaimah, plans are underway to develop the area into an archaeological park for visitors to explore the Wadi Suq tombs and the surrounding site.
